

CHILDREN'S DELHI DECLARATION 2017

The need for Human Rights Education is very important as it strengthens the Rights of the most marginalised groups, especially, the children, from discrimination and exploitation.

Human Rights Education is necessary for proper Implementation of Constitution of India and its core values, without human rights education development of all and for all cannot be achieved.

Human right education should be taught from class 1 to class 10, It should also be taught through, games, play & dramas, comics and social as well as digital media.

Keeping in mind the children at risk and the ones who are vulnerable, The Government of India should design programmes that involve the teaching of Human Rights Education beginning from their home like family especially women and children from the age of 3 year, as well as right from aanganwadi centres, schools till the college level.
